PreSchool-Grade 2 "A new cast of brightly colored dinosaurs appears in this charming back-to-school story. The text's easy rhyme and rhythm will be familiar to those who have read other books in this series, and Teague's charismatic and naughty dinosaurs will continue to delight readers with their antics and exuberance. The illustration accompanying "DOES A DINOSAUR YELL?" is sure to elicit smiles as an excited Herrerasaurus leaps out of his chair proudly holding up a newly lost tooth. His teacher looks annoyed, but his classmates all turn toward him with their own gap-toothed grins. The 10 dinosaurs that appear are identified on the endpapers where each is hard at work or play. Stygimoloch using one arm to prop up his raised hand as he blurts out is also likely to draw a smile from veteran teachers. A fun read-aloud for the first day of school." Neala Arnold,

This eighth entry (counting the two board books) in the Yolen/Teague How Do Dinosaurs series features a cast of 10 brightly colored dinosaurs that manage to dominate the double-page spreads without overwhelming them. Questions arise when the dinos are put in common school-day situations. Would dinosaurs walk to school or carpool? Would they stomp and make a fuss on the bus? Would they roughhouse and punch and disrupt the class by yelling or fidgeting with their tails in the air? Of course not. Before they leap out the door at the end of the school day, readers will realize that these dinosaurs are helpful, tidy, and protective, "growling at the bullies till the bullying ends." Yolen's short, rhyming text and Teague's irresistible, cavorting dinosaurs perfectly convey how dinosaurs could behave in school, large and powerful though they may be. Fans of the other titles in the series will welcome this new lesson on how to behave properly yet manage to remain a true dinosaur. Randall Enos Copyright © American Library Association. I like the go to bed one much better. My 2.5yo toddler doesn't get the go to bed book yet, she still asks me why every page the dinosaurs look different haha but she just loves that book I'm not even sure exactly what's captivating her so much that she must read it once at bed time every night. And she actually tucks herself in now because of the book. But this school one just not very good, it's confusing as the pictures and text don't match and while the go to bed book hits all the right points (slam tail and pout, throw teddy bear all about, demands another story read, swing neck from side to side, fall on top of covers and cry) I don't feel that the go to school book hits all the right points plus the English wording is just plain odd....that said I think it's only fair that I add that my toddler still like this one just not as much!

Bought for my nephew who loves dinosaurs. I've gotten him about 6 of the books in this series and his mother says he wants her to read them over and over. Would recommend.

We love this series and own several of the other "How do Dinosaurs.." This one is very cute and perfect to read to kids at the beginning of the school year. My boys are 5 and have enjoyed this series for awhile and don't seem to be getting tired of it yet.

good kids book

My 5 year old and 17 month old boys LOVE all the "how do dinosaurs..." Books. These are great because they list the type of dinosaurs on each page. So my 5 year old will not let me turn the page without asking what type of dinosaur is this one. My 17 month old likes to hold onto the hard board books and point to the dinosaurs.

Great book for our 6 year old kindergarden grandson. He loved it.

The CD stops working midway through. Wish I had used prime, can't return it now.

I got this for my son when he started kindergarten and he loves reading it.
