Youth and family ministry worker and counselor David Lynn has worked with young people and their families for more than three decades. He is the creator of TalkSheets and author of numerous books, the creator of Building up Your Ministry, and he conducts several leadership training workshops. He lives with his family in Tucson, Arizona.

My Sunday School class varies a great deal. I might have 3 kids or I might have 10. They range in ages from 4-14. These talk sheets present one point and give all of the children a chance to voice their thoughts. The bible verses tie in well and help them to realize the relevance of God's word even in today's world. I am using another book along with this that has activities.

I used these with a small (4-6 students) mixed class of 6-11 graders in Sunday school. The kids liked the format, but the topics are redundant if used weekly. The sheets talk a lot about media influences (TV and music, especially). That's an important topic with middle and high school aged kids, but it's not something you want to talk about several times a month. I would use these to supplement other curriculum. For occasional use, they are great.

Good experience

Good lessons, wish it had more Bible references.

This product was okay. There weren't as many diversify lessons as I would have like there to be. This book assumes that all middle school and high school or's come from the same background and face the same types of problems. It really wasn't relevant in an inner-city setting.

Great topics. Definitely more for High school students than Junior high students. I advise the teacher to study the plan and see if you can come up with more ways to make the topic more specific to the youth group you are teaching.

Very effective for my middle school youth group. Some topics are more appropriate for older kids. Use discretion and wisdom in choosing topics for your group.

Great bible study tool, my daughter is studying the book in her bible study class and talk about the lessons constantly.
