The drawing are not as good as that of other artists of this genre, but they do inspire the imagination.

If there is one thing I can always count on Sal Quartuccio to do it is to find the latest and greatest pin-up artists and he's done so again with "Naughty Girls" The art of Joe Pekar. Pekar is another enormously talented guy on the cutting edge of digitally produced art--but I defy anyone who would have guessed that his exquisite work was digitally produced. Pekar's work is slightly reminiscent of Joe Chiodo with his women having those big, blustery eyes, but that's about where the similarities end. As the title suggests, Pekar's women are quite the naughty vixens, and yet maintain an alluring air of innocence that make them irresistible. This 48 page gallery of Pekar's work is full color and simply dazzling. One need only check out the cover with teasing schoolgirl to know that you are in for a visual treat. Schoolgirls are a running theme throughout the book and presented in a variety of clever avenues. One of my favorite pieces is of a couple of girls getting caught lighting up a cigarette in the bathroom. It's a piece I'd love to have hanging up in my office. Another recurring theme is that of one girl playing the temptress to another such as the girl with the laptop proclaiming "Ummm...I thought I was coming over to study" as her friend passionately nibbles on her ear. And what collection of this type would be complete without a pillow fight as Pekar gives us a quartet of lingerie-clad cuties battling it out with their down-filled weapons. Pekar provides a diverse bevy of subjects...there's the gothic girl, The girl scout, the cowgirl, the soldier girl, pirate, fire fighter, Red Riding Hood, and one of the most wickedly hot witches I've ever laid my eyes on. This is simply a phenomenal collection from cover-to-cover. Pekar is staking his claim as one of the top pin-up artists around today. Highly recommended! Reviewed By Tim Janson
