Karen Desrosiers is a writer living in New Hampshire with her young son. Growing up in a military family Karen developed the travel bug from a young age. She has spent most of her life traveling across the United States, Canada, and Europe. She now travels with her son, spending many weekends exploring. A direct descendant of Louis Hébert, one of the first settlers of Québec, Canada is like going home for Karen. Her connection to and love for the country are evident. In addition to travel articles and guides, Karen writes essays on single parenting, other non-fiction books, and novels.

Great for summer trips. Won't use it as much in winter because you have to drive and not sure about the conditions.
