Our Story Begins: Your Favorite Authors And Illustrators Share Fun, Inspiring, And Occasionally Ridiculous Things They Wrote And Drew As Kids

Synopsis

From award-winning author Elissa Brent Weissman comes a collection of quirky, smart, and vulnerable childhood works by some of today's foremost children's authors and illustrators—revealing young talent, the storytellers they would one day become, and the creativity they inspire today. Everyone's story begins somewhere | For Linda Sue Park, it was a trip to the ocean, a brand-new typewriter, and a little creative license. For Jarrett J. Krosoczka, it was a third grade writing assignment that ignited a creative fire in a kid who liked to draw. For Kwame Alexander, it was a loving poem composed for Mother's Day—and perfected through draft after discarded draft. For others, it was a teacher, a parent, a beloved book, a word of encouragement. It was trying, and failing, and trying again. It was a love of words, and pictures, and stories. Your story is beginning, too. Where will it go?

Customer Reviews

"Twenty-six notable authors and illustrators of children's books—including the book's editor—introduce themselves via their childhood memories. The short, straightforward introduction begins with the editor sharing her inspiration for the book.... Two years of interviewing, collecting, and collating produced the accessible, enjoyable text that follows. Each creator shares a childhood photograph, a brief memoir, a short biography, and a photographed sample of a creative work from childhood.... The art and writing samples from childhood are occasionally exciting but more often typical of the age representedâ and thus encouraging rather than intimidating to young creatives. The memoirsâ all (unsurprisingly) engagingâ range from humorous to serious, and some slip in good advice, both about the tools of the craft and about self-marketing. There is a wide diversity of ages and backgrounds, from Phyllis Reynolds Naylor to Alex Gino, from Eric Rohmann to Rita Williams-Garcia. ThanhhÃ Lai is especially memorable; as a Vietnamese refugee, she had no box of writings: "But it turns out, I don't need tangible objects. I have my memories." Her recollection of an oral prose poem from age 8 is one that stands out because it is indeed remarkable for one so young. Good for aspiring writers and artists." (Kirkus Reviews, May 2017)"Firsthand accounts from 26 childrenâ TM's authors and illustrators describe how their earliest writing or drawing experiences resulted in a career in kid lit.... An attractive cover, glossy pages, and writing tips will make this a great addition to collective biography or career sections. VERDICT: An authentic, generous, and inspiring selection for tweens who wonder where their doodling or journaling might take them." (School Library Journal, May 2017)"The best authors and artists make their work seem so effortless that itâ TM's easy to assume theyâ TM're allÂ preternaturally gifted; itâ TM's easy to forget the inevitable time and labor that went into their work, and thisÂ collection is the perfect remedy to that misapprehension. In short sections, childrenâ TM's literature luminariesÂ offer short essays about their early artistic efforts and snippets of their early work...the mainÂ takeaway, of course, isÂ that hard work and practice, as well as a lot of inevitable failure, is always part of honing aÂ craft. A sweet,Â inspirational anthology for any kid who dreams of one day having their own name on the cover of a book." (Booklist, June 2017)"This collection offers a lively glimpse of the artistic starts of twenty-six writers and illustrators for youth, with notable contributors such as Kwame Alexander, Dan Santat, Phyllis Reynolds Naylor, and Linda Sue Park . . . The snapshots of the artists as young men and women are engaging and irreverent . . . There are a lot of shoutouts to influential teachers, a lot of early imitation (rightly recognized as a valid exercise), and a clear message throughout that this early work counts, whether you finish it, whether itâ TM's completely original, whether it wins you the regard you hopedâ | this has curricular use written all over it (thereâ TM's even tips for young writers at the end) and the encouragement is strong and valuable. Plenty of young readers will salivate at the notion of living the dream described by Jarrett J. Krosoczka: &#39;What I do now for my job is exactly what I did for fun when I was a kid.&#39;" (BCCB July/August 2017)

My sons Chris and Logan read this book and really enjoyed it. Loganâ€™s Review: I really liked this book. Some of the stories were really funny. The stories were entertaining and kept my attention so I was able to finish reading in just a couple hours. My favorite story was Marla Frazeeâ€™s where she was talking about John always dropping stuff. In Dan Santatâ€™s story, I liked when he was talking about how even though he couldnâ€™t draw very well, he never gave up. That teaches you to keep trying no matter what. I thought it was awesome that Jarrett J. Krosoczka finished his story when he was in the third grade at age 8. I like the pictures that were included of each author when they were little and the drawings and things that they did. It was really cool to see all of those. Chrisâ€™ Review: I really enjoyed looking at all of the pictures that the authors drew when they were little. That was pretty neat and some of the pictures were really unique. The different stories were pretty funny. My favorite one was by Yuyi Morales. Everyoneâ€™s story was so different and interesting so I never got bored while reading this book. It was entertaining.

What an amazing compilation of stories and illustrations by some of today's best kidlit people! I loved hearing about their 'why' for writing and also how it wasn't perfect that first time. So many children think they need to be perfect and successful on their first attempt at anything, and this book shows that it does take time. Our Story Begins will make an excellent addition to any classroom or school library and readers of all ages will enjoy it!
