Night Night, Little Tiger

Synopsis

Reading bedtime stories to her two-year-old son, Catherine felt there was one missing from their collection a bedtime story about Clemson. So she and her sister Elizabeth wrote this book. A fun book for children and grandchildren of Clemson alumni, students, faculty, and fans! We hope you and your Little Tigers enjoy reading Night-Night, Little Tiger and make many Clemson memories!

Being reared eleven miles from Clemson University, and youngest daughters of a Clemson graduate, South Carolina State Senator T. Ed. Garrison, Jr., there was no question that Catherine and Elizabeth like their older siblings, Gaye, Tom, Bart, and Lee would go anywhere other than Clemson! Like other Little Tigers, their love for Clemson began early. Catherine and Elizabeth loved going to football games with their family. Game day mornings, the girls would set up a display of all their Clemson treasures on their farms sign by the road for all to see on their way to Death Valley. It was especially exciting to cheer as the Clemson football teams buses zoomed by headed to the game! While at Clemson, Elizabeth and Catherine were roommates and sorority sisters. Elizabeth was on IPTAY Student Advisory Board and received the Trustees Medal for public speaking. Catherine was a University Tour Guide and Clemson Homecoming Queen. Or was it Elizabeth? (As identical twins, they had lots of fun confusing folks all over campus!) Catherine lives in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina with her husband Mark and their two little boys, Tillman and James.

Elizabeth and her husband Jake live in Greenville and own and operate Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants. All return frequently to help with events at their family's Century Farm, Denver Downs, in Anderson and still love going to Clemson events.

Super cute, got as gift for my brother who just graduated from Clemson. Only complaint is I wish it had more artwork of actual spots on campus and shows more the tradition.

We are tremendous Clemson University fans with a family legacy to the school. What an education from there and what a precious book for my grandsons. They love night time reading and this is great since they also come to all the games. Thank you for this cute little book.

Such a cute book! My 9 year old son loved it. He said even if the words were a bit easy for him to read, the story made him happy!

Bought as a baby shower gift for a friend who is a Clemson fan. They loved it. I think daddy enjoys it the most.

Sweet book! My husband loves this book! The baby will one day when he figures out what we are reading him every night!

Bought for a Clemson alum who had never heard of the book, she loves it!

Loved it! Such a great gift for any Clemson fan. My niece is really enjoying it!!

My grandchild loves this book
