Wired: A 4-Week Devotional Experience For Students

Synopsis

You have heard that this generation of students is disengaged. They have checked out. They can't peel their eyes away from their phones. Maybe you believe they're a hopeless case. In a disconnected and distracting world, how can teens connect with God and with others? As social media savvy as they are, as plugged in and fast-paced as they are, deep down, today's teenagers still experience a steady stream of questions that no amount of cell phone use and Netflix watching will make disappear. They, like all generations before them, have questions about faith, about their identity, and about their purpose. WIRED walks students through four key ideas: Connecting with God: How to interact with a God we can't see or touch. Loving their life: How to better understand who God made them to be. Embracing community: How to treat the people around them and to surround themselves with the right people. Serving others: How to use the gifts they have to make an impact on the world around them. Whether your students have been in church for 10 years or 10 weeks, WIRED supports solid, foundational beliefs about God, themselves, and others, and then equips them to put these beliefs into action. WIRED is a four-week, interactive journal and is part of the XP3 Devotional Series, which includes Know God: A 28-Day Devotional Experience for Students and Live Free: A 5-Week Devotional Journal for Students (and Anyone Else Who Needs a Little More Grace in Their Lives). "Got teenagers? Get WIRED. I wish this fantastic resource had been available when my kids were navigating the complex and often confusing worlds of middle school and high school. Don't miss this opportunity for my friends Rodney and Sarah to say to your teenagers what you've been saying, or perhaps wish you could say. Get WIRED."--Andy Stanley, senior pastor, North Point Community Church

Sarah Anderson is a writer and communicator who has been involved in ministry since 2003. In 2007, she joined Orange, a nonprofit organization whose purpose is to influence those who influence the next generation. She is a lead writer and content creator for XP3 High School curriculum and is a contributing writer to the Parent Cue blog, TheParentCue.org. Rodney Anderson is a pastor, a writer, and a communicator who has spent 15 years in full-time ministry. He is the Multi-Campus Director of Singles at North Point Ministries. Rodney also partners with Orange to develop curriculum for middle and high school students. Rodney and Sarah live in Roswell, Georgia, with their two boys, Asher and Pace.

I'm a mom of three teenagers, ages 13, 16 and 18. I'm always on the search for resources that will help them grow in their relationship with God. WIRED is definitely one of those resources! I was amazed at how the writers took such big God size truths and explained them in such simple and easy to understand ways. I wish every student (and parent) could be fortunate enough to read this devotional.

This book is brilliant. Why? Because it's appropriate for a kid who is brand new (or hasn't even started) their faith journey and it's also challenging for an adult who has been a believer for 20 years (ahem...me). Somehow the authors have put together words in such away that they're engaging for a senior high student and still comprehensible to a middle schooler. I'm so glad I was able to send this devo to 4 of my favorite teenagers and still keep a copy for myself.

I have been leading small groups at my local church for years, and I'm always looking for something to help my students stay on track throughout the week. This devo does just that. The 4-week format is great - long enough to be effective in a student's life, but short enough that they don't feel intimidated to start it. Highly recommended!

I love that this is such a practical way to challenge a student to connect with God in a way they may have not tried in previous devotionals. And as a small group leader and a parent I appreciate having a different voice in my students and kids lives emphasize the same truths I am teaching them!

WIRED is the answer for the girls in my small group who are always asking for something that is easy to read but makes them think! I love that this devotional focuses on one Scripture reference and breaks it down into understandable bites for any student to digest. By weaving questions throughout each daily devo, students are able to think through their personal lens rather than just reading and giving expected answers at the end of the section. Also, the TRY THIS at the end of each week allows them to see a tangible way for what they've been reading to be put into action.
